Forecast for Monday 20 Jun 2022

Weather: Clear spells overnight and feeling chilly with some local ground frost as winds ease towards dawn. A clear sunrise is likely for most ranges and a sunny morning to follow. Increasing cloud spilling in from the north west during the afternoon, the Southern Cairngorms likely to stay mostly cloud free until late afternoon. Some rain spreading in towards western ranges around Ben Lawers by late afternoon and there will be outbreaks of rain across all but perhaps the Angus Glens areas by late evening.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 800m: 100% falling to 70% by late afternoon, lowering cloud from the west.

Low Cloud and visibility: Very good visibility for most of the day, perhaps moderate by late evening if light rain falls mainly affecting western hills. Cloud will be above all summits until later when it will become scattered above 600m in the west around Killin and Glen Lyon, patches around 700m will develop around the Glenshee hills later too.

Met Office Aberdeen Meteorologist's View

Despite a cool start to the day temperatures will be warm at low level in the east later. Winds will be lighter than the weekend but will strengthen later in the evening again.

Forecast for Tuesday 21 Jun 2022

Weather: Outbreaks of rain overnight and lots of mist over the hills, especially in the west. Cloudy with outbreaks of drizzly light rain, perhaps a few cloud breaks in the east. Cloud beginning to lift in the evening.

Maximum wind: Northwesterly 10-15mph.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 800m: 60%, low cloud in association with light rain moving in from the west.

Low Cloud and visibility: Scattered or broken cloud above 600m, perhaps 500m or less far west. Cloud will gradually lift and break during the afternoon with some of the Glenshee tops clear by early evening. Visibility will fall poor in drizzly outbreaks of rain, especially further west of the A9.

Temperature: Glens: Plus 10 rising to 20 Celsius.
At 800m: Plus 6 rising to 12 Celsius.
Freezing level: above the summits.
